DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

2. Claims 1, 3, 5, 7-12, 15, 20, 45, 46, 48, and 49 are rejected under 35

U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Petropoulos, et al..

Petropoulos, beginning in col. 5, line 36, discloses both a coil and the method of designing the coil comprising selecting an open geometry for the coil; selecting a region of interest for a field produced by the coil; defining a current density distribution for the coil; and numerically optimizing the current density distribution to produce a field of selected characteristics in the region of interest, specifically by numerically optimizing amplitudes (Lagrange multipliers) of a plurality of sinusoidal functions and employing a stream function technique (col.6, line 56). With regards to wherein the coil is configurable for use in transcranial magnetic stimulation, it has been held that the recitation that an element is capable of, i.e., configurable for performing a function is not a positive limitation but only requires the ability to so perform. It does not constitute a limitation in any patentable sense. In re Hutchison, 69 USPQ 138.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. Claims 4, 17 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Petropoulos.

Petropoulos did not disclose wherein numerically optimizing the current density comprises simulated annealing. It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to employ a simulated annealing technique since the examiner takes Official Notice of the equivalence of simulated annealing and Lagrange optimization for their use in the art and the selection of any of these known numerical optimization techniques would be within the level of ordinary skill in the art.

Allowable Subject Matter

5. Claims 2, 6, 16 and 47 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

6. The following is a statement of reasons for the indication of allowable subject matter: None of the prior art of record taught or reasonably suggested wherein the selected geometry comprises a substantially half cylindrical shell.
